WAYSIDE WISDOM

by

Paul Jans

IN ALL FRIENDLINESS

Maybe you do not love other people enough if you always want to feel superior to them as 'queen bee' or as 'top dog.' This attitude may not be the same as a spite-hedge erected but nevertheless it could be, decidedly, a partition-ship between yourself and finer friendships.

There are other folks who will even settle down to narrow down or die with the conviction that the more they see and have to do with other people, the more they like themselves, entirely regardless of how loveless they themselves might be in unconsciously throwing up barriers, the while still craving love. Sharp tongues may also wound as much as sabres. We are not so wounded by our neighbors when we really love them, and they will be more apt to lay aside their sabres rather than ridicule or hate us if we do. Modern communism seems to be the only philosophy (mistakenly called a religion) in the World impervious to all integrity of honor and the wholesome leaven of love from without, because apparently it hasn't started to work yet from within in this respect by reason of having no intention of doing so.

To expect to receive friendship in return for a blackmailed gift-donation to an unfriendly country, is nothing short of an insult to our own people. If American citizens will not uphold honor, decency, and self-government, certainly their enemies or pretended friends will not. And they are not our friends who attempt to lower our ethical or likewise our economic standards and encourage us to live by that. But of course, fattening our enemies and betraying, or otherwise socializing our friends, is not the perfect manner of retaining friends regardless of how much money is spent upon such an absurdity. It is also smarter to win clean friends than dirty dollars.

PERSEVERENCE

Though loss yields grievance and suffering
 rends

The body - and slow seems 'right' to make amends -

Let us hate no one but choose our friends.

A false friend is more despicable
if not more treacherous than an avowed enemy.

UNDER THE PROPAGANDA BARRAGE

False friends only act

To serve their own ends,

Using too much (or too little) tact

To hope to make amends.

Of friends, others say: "The difficulty is not so great to die for a friend as to find a friend worth dying for."---

Home. "It is easier to forgive an Enemy than to forgive a friend."---Blake, from Didactic & Symbolical works. "She has friends she hasn't used yet."---Walter Winchell, Spiced Tongue, Digest."---She was everlastingly unappeased, because incurably romantic. All life, she truly declared, is a search for a friend. Unfortunately she sought with her eyes open, having never grasped the elementary truth that to find a friend one must close one eye: to keep him--two. She always attributed to men qualities which she afterwards discovered they did not possess. Her life since the marrying period had been a breathless succession of love affairs, each one more eternal than the last."---Normal Douglas, South Wind, referring to Madame Steynlin. (Bonibook Series.) "One of the most bitter things in the World is to discover that one's friendship is a danger to those one loves."--Illeana, Princess of Romania, I Live Again, page 170, Reinhart Co.Inc. "51-52."

Not under the will of the people or government of the people do we have wars and the despoiling of nations, but under bad if not treacherous leadership. But always a few self-sacrificing souls may be found who gladly give their services, often including life, time, money, and resources, to ease the pain of the victims.

How few arose from graves to holy bliss
With something sacred after Armistice--
How few in all the World to this life's end

Have been a faithful everlasting friend!

OF FRIENDS

Wait until a stalwart's found
Or things may not go well---
Why listen for a depth of sound
From a narrow shallow shell?

"---my advice would be, avoid the popular person if you would have peace of mind. Give your friendship to people whose hunger will cause them to be grateful for it, and save your love for those who are not suffering from a surfeit."--
The Philistine, Jan. '13.

THE GARDEN OF SOUL-SYMPATHY

"Friendship"

"More fair than that we call,
In witless dearth of wisdom, love,
Which truly asketh all,
And somewhat gives, but would enchain
Its glowing swain.
For this bestows the best,
In that it loves and letteth love,
Not says with pride's behest
Love me alone, or else depart
From out my heart.

No poorer at its close
Than at its dawn, such hearts embrace;
A tranquil way it flows."

---Cyril Scott, Excerpts from The Voice of the Ancient

SYMBOLISM OF THE GREAT PYRAMID

BY

DR. M. DOREAL

The Great Pyramid of Gizeh was never used as a tomb, and the chambers opened to the public are but a few of the many yet unopened chambers.

You will find this extraordinary book the most instructive exposition of this monumental wonder of the Ages that has ever been written. It is a compendium of occult facts, never before given to the public at large; many of the Ancient Pyramid Mysteries are revealed. This book establishes certain facts that will astound the most learned and scientific Egyptian Archeology students. After you have read this book you will want it in your library for further study and reference.

Scores of books have been written about the Great Pyramid, but the writer of this review has not seen one book upon the Pyramid that contains even a part of the information contained in "SYMBOLISM OF THE GREAT PYRAMID." It contains charts of the known and unknown chambers, also the Symbolic Significance of the Sphinx and its connection with the Pyramid.
